

WidePoint's ORC Subsidiary Enters Into Strategic Partnership With RSA Security to Address HSPD-12

Monday, July 03, 2006

Washington, D.C. -- WidePoint Corporation's (OTC Bulletin Board: WDPT) subsidiary Operational Research Consultants, Inc. (ORC) announced today a strategic partnership with RSA Security enabling the two companies to offer an integrated portfolio of Homeland Security Presidential Directive 12 (HSPD-12)-compliant identity and access management solutions to U.S. federal agencies and global commercial customers.

Through this agreement, ORC will serve as RSA Security's managed services provider for digital certificates, meeting the needs of agencies choosing externally-managed public key infrastructure (PKI). This is commonly referred to as a Shared Service Provider (SSP). This service complements the RSA™ Card Manager solution, a card management system that enables organizations to manage the lifecycle of authentication credentials stored on any smart chip-enabled device (e.g., smart cards). Together, RSA Card Manager and the ORC SSP PIVitol ID® provide core infrastructure for meeting HSPD-12 requirements.

As one of only two U.S. government-approved External Certificate Authority vendors, and the recent recipient of U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) FIPS 201 Approval, ORC is a well-established and trusted partner to U.S. federal agencies. ORC is currently the only provider of Personal Identity Verification (PIV)-ready solutions, including a hosted validation service.

Under the agreement ORC will also provide FIPS 201 SSP certificate authority services to RSA Security in the federal marketplace and incorporate the complete suite of RSA Security products into its technology platform. By becoming a preferred provider in RSA Security's global distribution network, ORC will realize significant opportunities to sell PKI and HSPD-12 solutions to the international commercial sector.

Steve Komar, CEO of WidePoint, said, "This agreement validates the superiority of ORC's PKI solutions and our managed services capabilities. We believe RSA Security's confidence in us further establishes our credibility as the premier provider of information assurance services to the federal government. This agreement also represents a significant distribution channel for ORC services in the government credentialing space and as an extension of our reach among global commercial customers where RSA Security is well-known and highly respected. We look forward to working with RSA Security to make this a highly successful relationship for both companies."
