

WidePoint's iSYS Awarded First Task Order under FSSI TEM Contract for CDC and Further Expands TSA Contract

New Contract and Task Order represents additional $5 million in awards

Monday, September 08, 2008

WASHINGTON, D.C., -- WidePoint Corporation (AMEX: WYY), a leading provider of advanced information technology, identity assurance and protection and mobile telecom management services, today announced that its subsidiary, iSYS, has been awarded the first Task Order under the General Services Administration's (GSA) Federal Strategic Sourcing Initiative (FSSI) for Telecommunications Expense Management (TEM) with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The initial award is valued at approximately $3.5 million. iSYS has also been awarded a modification to expand its current contract with the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) for approximately $1.5 million.

iSYS President Jin Kang said, "We are very pleased to have won the first award granted under the GSA's FSSI TEM contract. Our services have received positive responses by many agencies and our competitive win of the CDC contract award demonstrates our superior service and cost effective solutions. As a result of our marketing efforts and our increased bid and proposal activity, we anticipate additional awards in the near future."

WidePoint CEO Steve Komar said, "iSYS has established itself as the leading provider to the federal government of mobile telecom management services and this win further validates this position. We look forward to strengthening our market-leading position within the Federal Government as the FSSI contract ramps up. We continue to be excited by the growth opportunities within this segment as we actively market to the 14 initial agencies participating under the GSA's FSSI contract and as we expand our services across all federal agencies and departments."
